7.2% of Game Lens WAU are playing games 5 or more days a week

These users also tend to have low bidi friend count, suggesting Games can be a strong engagement channel for less socially active/engaged Snapchatters

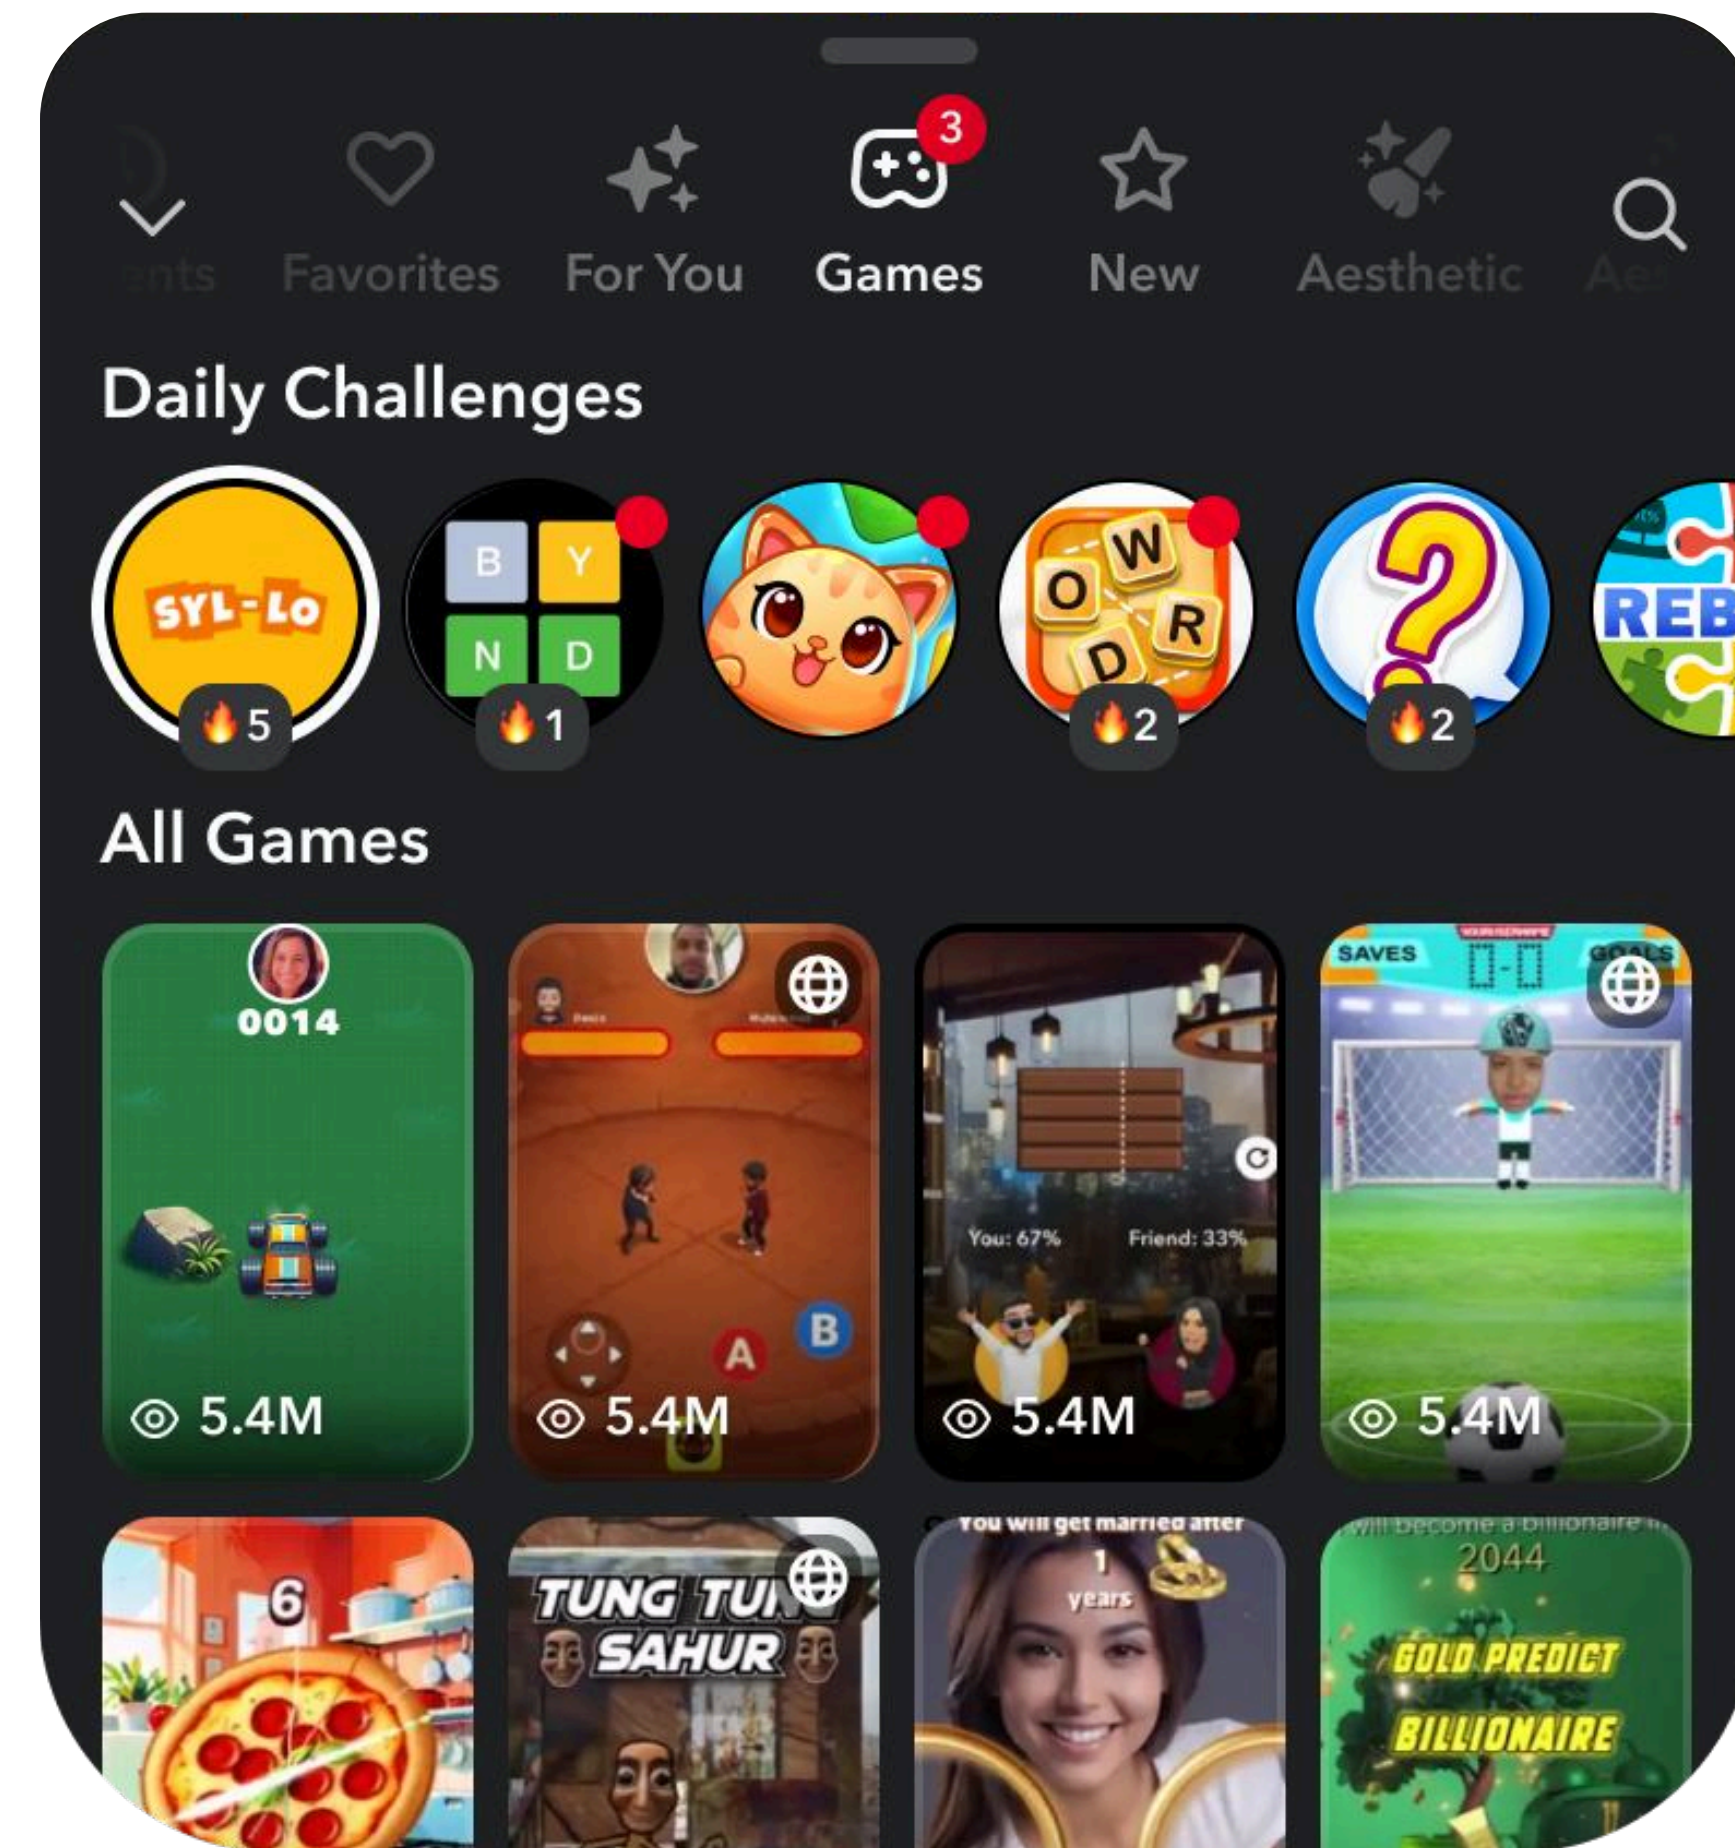

How can daily games be an engagement driver for us in Q4?

Let's start with the UX for how daily games will look/behave in the app, then we can discuss the games content separately.

Discovery (MVP)

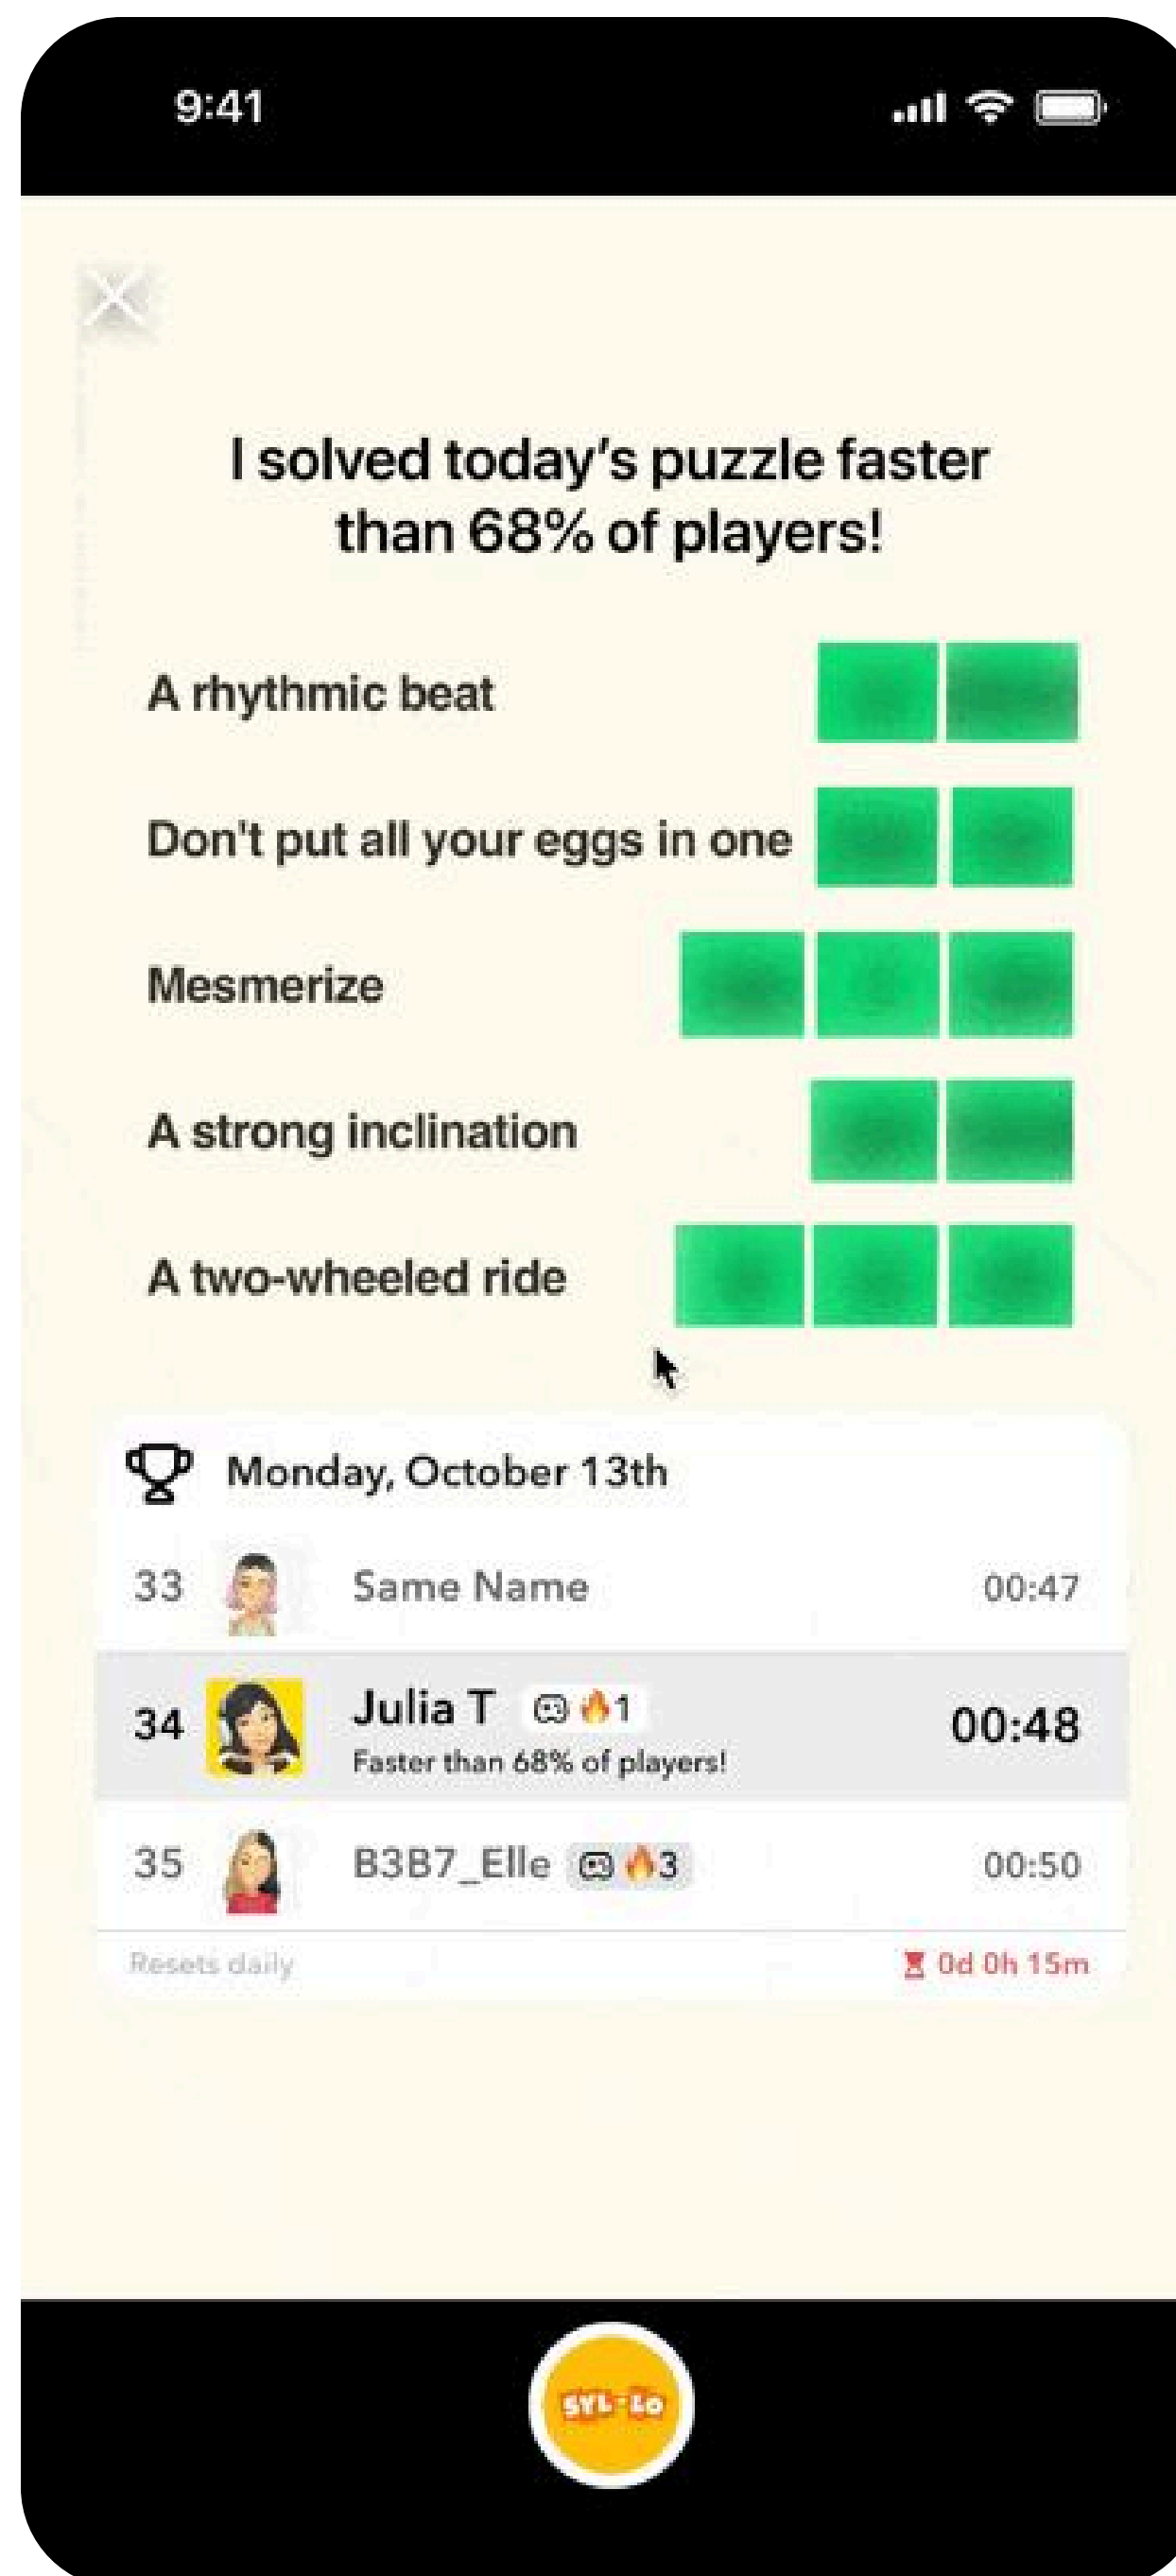

Pinned to front of Games carousel

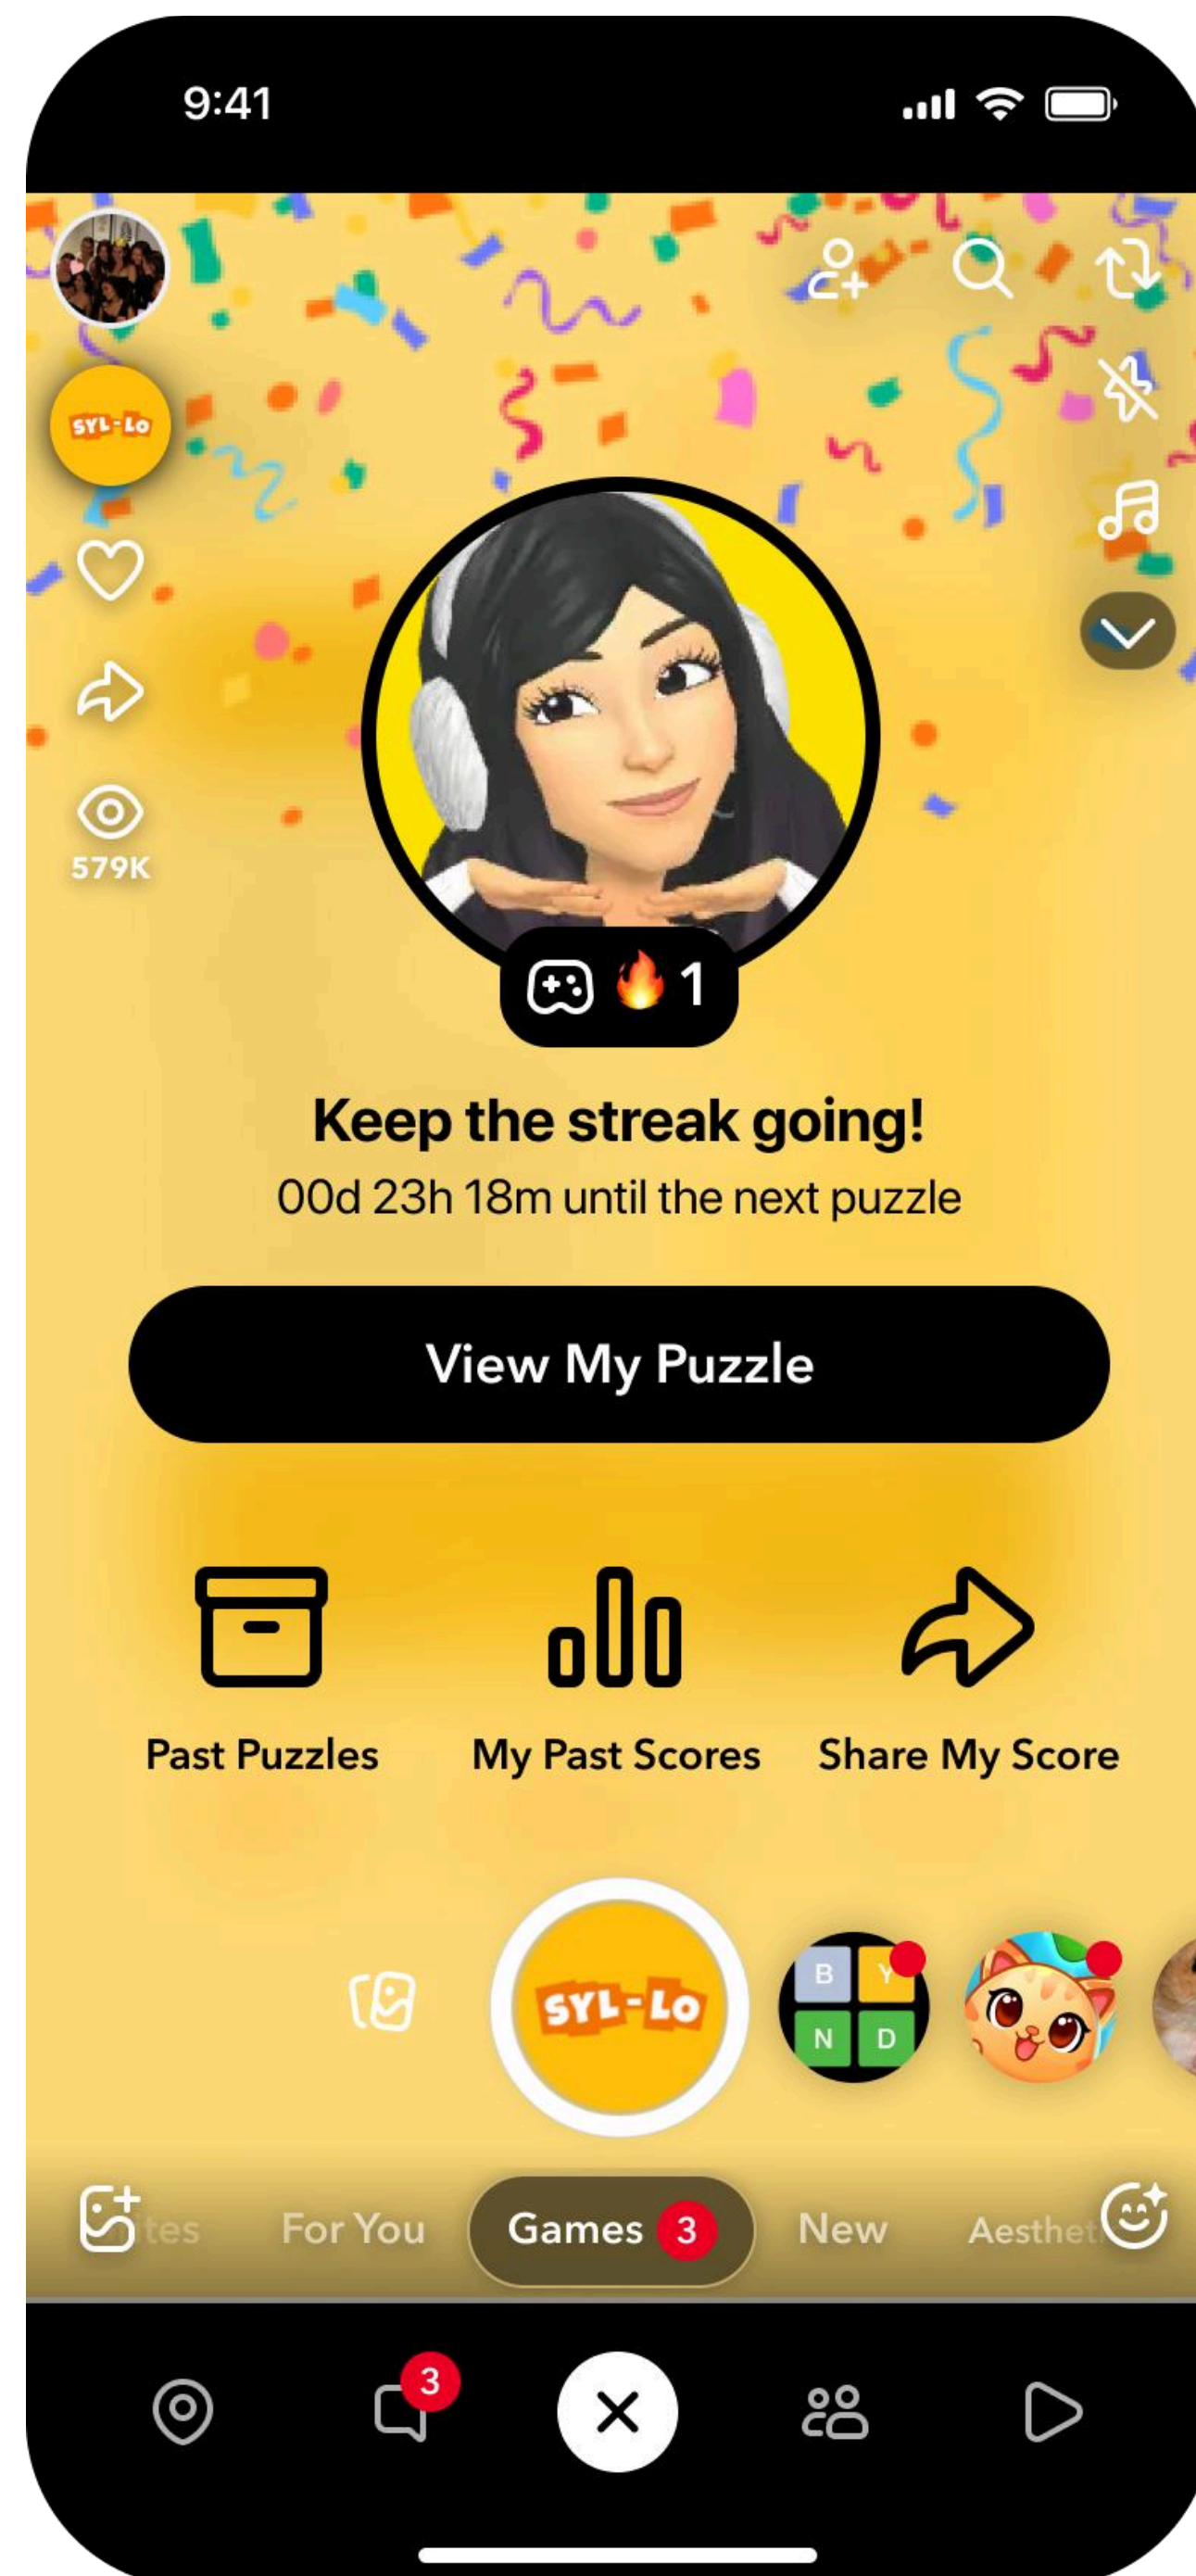

Daily challenges carousel in Games LE
(could do this for chat drawer too)

When you solve a puzzle...

- Daily leaderboard
- Auto-Snap and progress to Preview to share result
- Streaks for games

After returning to Lens post send, or when returning to the Lens
later in the day

Notifications for new content sent to:

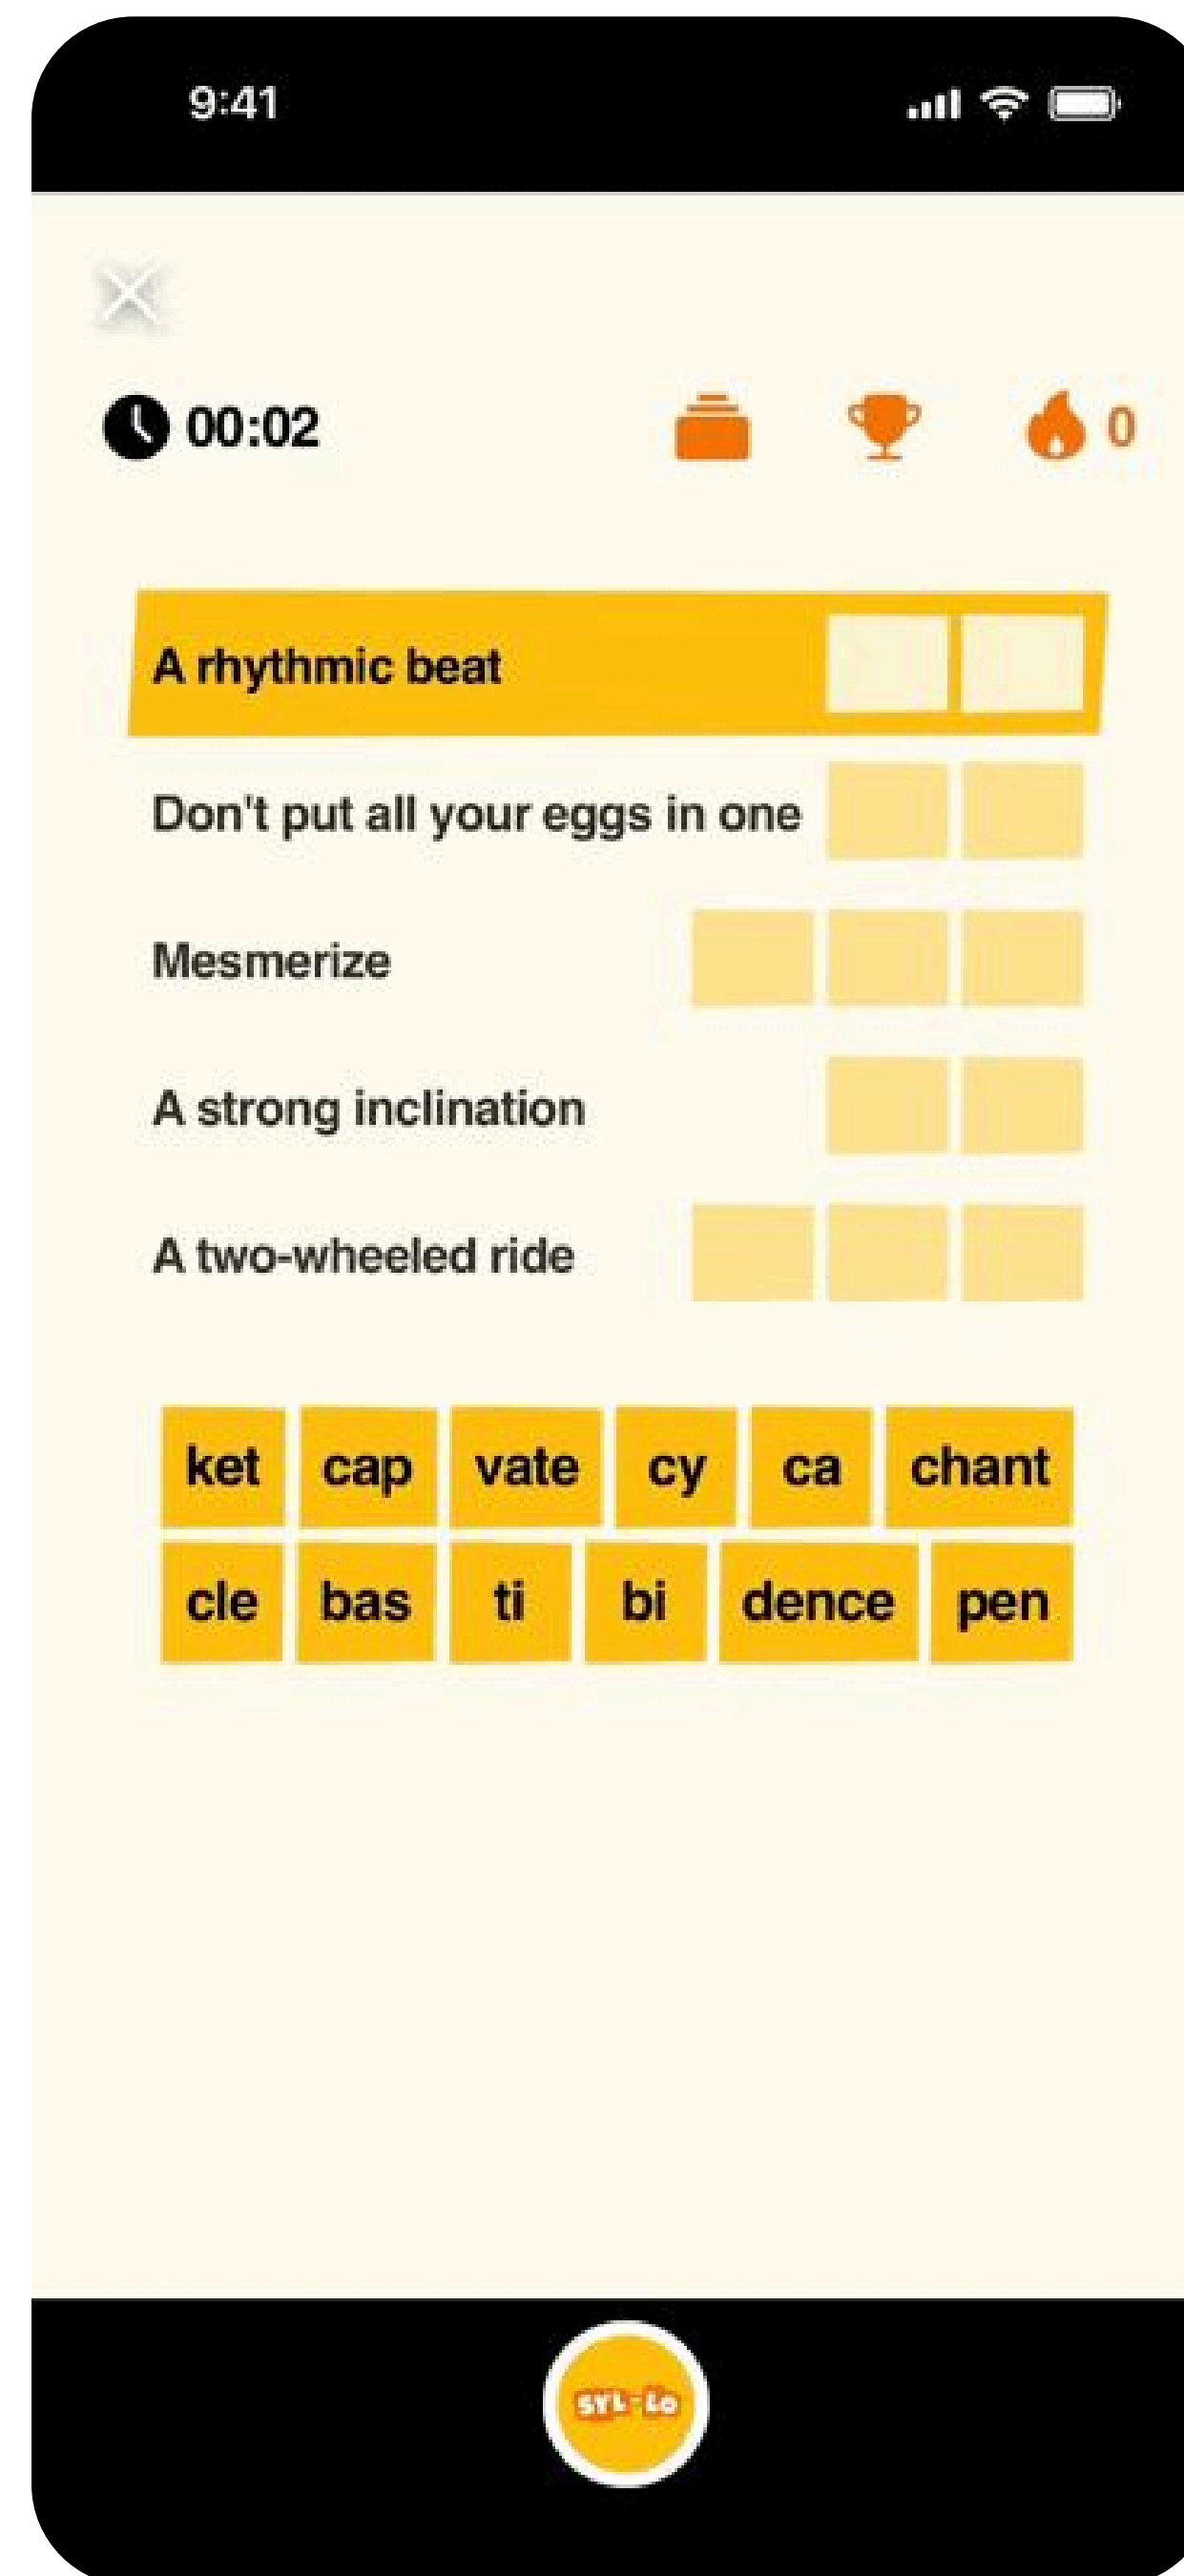

- Users who share/send/save their result
- Users who play past puzzles
- We'll gate this to users with a streak between 2-10

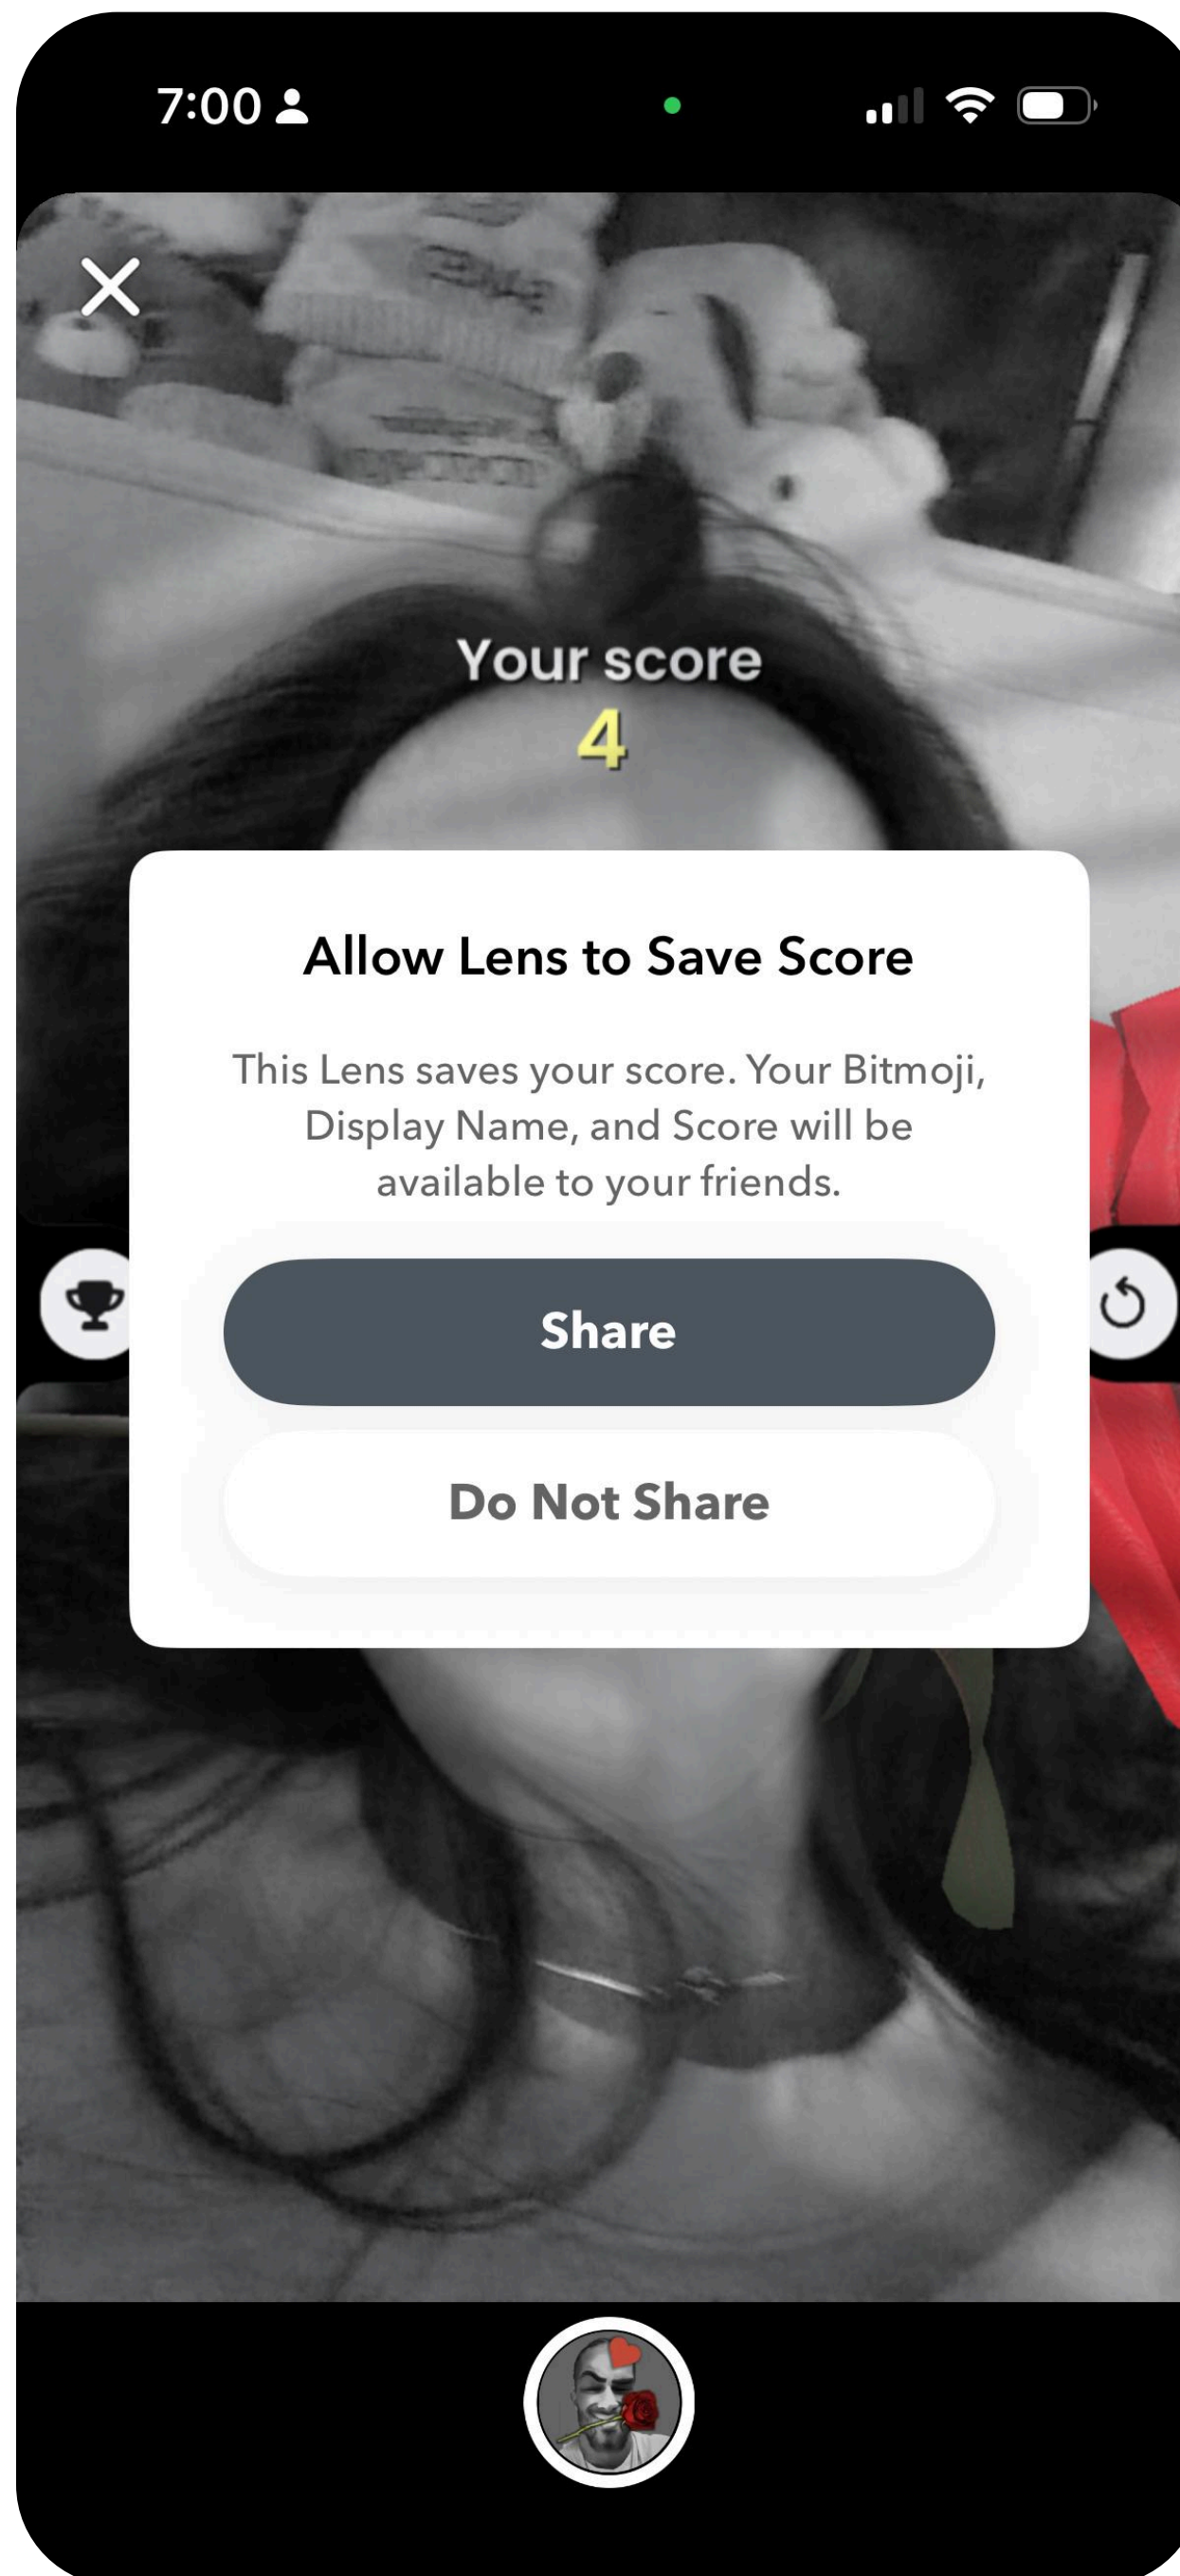

Notes from design meeting:

- No streak notifications
- Only social/friends notifs like above

Bonus:
Snap a friend to unlock game
powerups/hints for both of you

Today:
Leaderboard games ask permission to share on a per-lens basis, meaning you'd see this for each lens

Proposed:

Activity sharing becomes global (across all games) and opt out

- Widget appears when you start playing an eligible game
- Tap for more info
- Widget disappears after 2s

NOT APPROVED

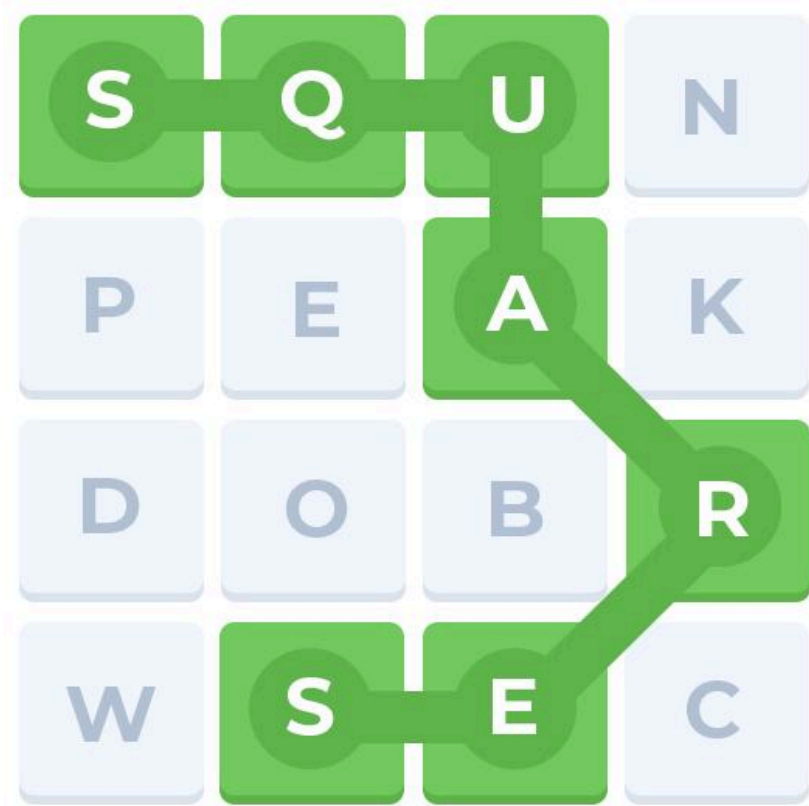

Notes from design meeting:

- Let's just do a one time opt in modal for all permissions the first time you land on a game
- be clear what we're collecting and how your activity is shared

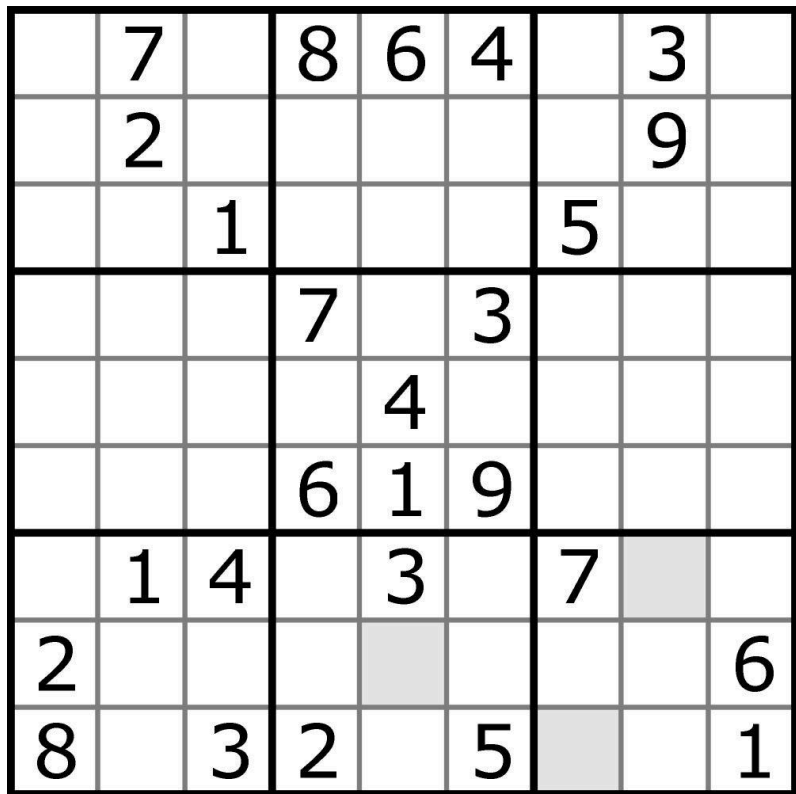

Content Strategy

We'll be reaching out to 2p developers to create the first set of these games or to port over existing popular daily games (so we can ensure quality)

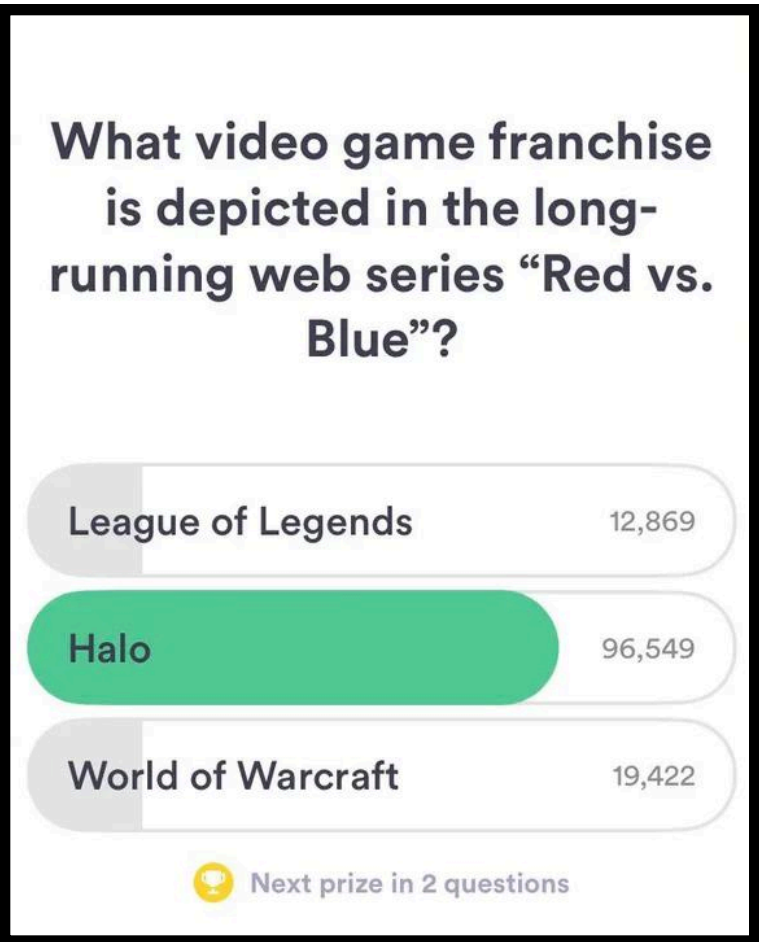

Starting with genres that have already seen success as a daily format:

Word Games

Puzzles

Trivia /
Interactive Stories

Sims with Daily Tasks to Progress the Game
